ABOUT MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT

Why is municipal government important? Of the three major forms of government in the United States – federal, state and local – none affects citizens more directly than local government. Many city, town and village governments provide vital services including police and fire protection, streets and roads, libraries, recreation and clean water.

Who are the leaders? The elected leaders of a city, town or village are the mayor and councilmembers. In Florida, councilmembers are elected directly by citizens. In some cities, towns and villages, the mayor is elected by citizens; in others, the mayor is elected by the council.

How are cities, towns and villages funded? Florida cities, towns and villages depend heavily on property tax revenue. They also receive fees from water services to your home and licenses, such as dog or bike licenses.
